Aims and Programme

The course aims at giving a critical insight into economic development and planning problems through the comparative analysis of underdevelopment interpretations and the critical analysis of development and planning experiences with particular reference to the Italian case.

Synthetically the curriculum is the following:

Analytical Tools

Linear algebra, linear programming, macroeconomics, input-output analysis, national accounting macroeconomics.

Economic Development

General aspects, economic and social interpretations of under-development, development models.

Development Policy

Theory of economic policy, targets and instruments of public intervention, general and sectorial policies.

Development Planning

Theory of economic planning, consistency and optimization models, aggregate and sectorial planning, project evaluation.

Case Studies

Development and planning experiences. Emphasis will be laid on Italian economic development since 1945 and on the Mezzogiorno problems.

The course is held by ISVE teaching staff as well as by Italian and foreign lecturers working in Universities or in agencies operating in the field of development.

Didactic methods include lectures, conferences, seminars, team-works, case studies and debates.

In order to enable participants to acquire a direct knowledge of the Italian economic performance ISVE organizes meetings with public and private economic operators as well as visits to the region's firms, plants and development agencies. Besides, a field-trip is scheduled during which seminars and meetings with economic operators will take place.

All didactic activities are carried out in Italian and English by means of simultaneous translation and the didactic material is issued in both languages.

The course activities amount to at least 30 hours a week and attendance is compulsory.

During the course participants will have to take evaluation tests.

A Diploma — certifying attendance and proficiency — will be given to those who regularly attend the course and who take the evaluation tests.

Admission to the Course

The course is addressed to public administration officials, university lecturers and researchers, executives of public and private enterprises, officials of international organizations operating in the sector of technical cooperation and development assistance.

Admission to the course requires:

- a University degree in Economics (or akin subject);
- a three-year working experience at least;
- proficiency in one of the following languages: Italian, French, English.

Value of Award

The scholarships will cover enrolment and tuition fees, travelling expenses from and to the capital of the participants' home country, compulsory health insurance, transportation as well as board and lodging expenses.
