PATRICIA DENYS

Was born in London and trained at The Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts, where she won the Emile Littler Prize.

Her first job was in the film "Trials of Oscar Wilde", which starred Peter Finch.

She has since worked in Ipswich, Salisbury and at the Bristol Old Vic., and has toured in "Roots", "The Wrong Side of the Park", and (in South Africa) played the lead in "A Shot in the Dark".

Her latest appearance in the West End was as Blanche in "A Streetcar named Desire" when she took over the part played by Claire Bloom (who was ill) with great success. This year she also appeared in "Out of Practice" by one of her favourite playwrights (Feydeau) at the Theatre Royal, Stratford East; an actress of much experience.

Miss Denys's many television appearances include "Ironhand", "Lee Oswald — Assassin", "The July Plot," "The Avengers", "Troubleshooters", "Z Cars", "Honey Lane", last year she played Carole in "Crossroads" and most recently Sister Aitken in "Angels".

She is extremely fond of walking, sunbathing and flowers.

JOYCE FENBY

Joyce Fenby

After training at the London Old Vic under Glen Byam Shaw and George Devine, Joyce went straight into a highly successful career as leading lady with some of the best-known companies, married her director, and took time off to raise a family.

Since then she has returned to a successful career in the theatre and television, appearing with many well-known actors including Leslie Crowther in "Tonight at 8.30", Bernard Lee in "The Waltz of the Toreadors" and Jack Watling in "Lady Audley's Secret". More recently she has made a number of guest appearances in "Busybody", "There Goes the Bride", "Forget-me-not Lane" and "Duet For Two Hands".
