THE GLENN MILLER STORY

GLENN MILLER was born in 1904 at Clarinda, USA. During the late twenties Glenn Miller joined the Ben Pollaks' Band for which he arranged and played the Jazz trombone, but unfortunately the band broke up in the early thirties.

As he was a very close friend of the world famous clarinet player Benny Goodmann, who happened to be in the same band, both hoped they could find enough work to support them, but life was not that easy.

It was in 1938, eight years later, when Glenn Miller became the leader of the most popular band in the country. In 1939, he became world famous with his recordings of Moonlight Serenade, Little Brown Jug and In the Mood.

He was a dedicated musician and an excellent arranger, full of original ideas, in fact he was also the musical arranger of the Dorsey Brothers Band.

At the time of Pearl Harbour, he was determined to help in the war effort. In 1942 he joined the army as a musician and was appointed Leader of the U.S. Air Force Band whose concerts have thrilled thousands of troops.

On December 15, 1944 he set off from Bedford, England to entertain the troops in the newly liberated Paris. The weather conditions were appalling and the tiny aircraft never did reach France.

Glenn Miller was never seen again, but it is a fitting tribute to both the man, and his music, that his distinctive sound has lived on, bringing a world of joy and pleasure to four generations of music lovers.
