

Dragonfly at Delphi

by Anita Howard

Watch her there!
She falls and rises surely within this forge of air that tries us all - beyond us, at long last.

A god's voice from the fissure,
a vision half-explained and never owned.

Cicada cries unite in harmony all about their broken troves of stone, as she flies free.