Foreword to the Second Edition

When the first edition of this publication came out three and a half years ago, I wrote in its foreword about this Library's intention to update the List annually and added that automation would make the publication of annual cumulations of the List a simple matter.

Staff problems as well as problems of other sorts have prevented us from carrying out our promise. Even the micro-computer we thought was round the corner in 1984 has not yet arrived, though only a stroke of extraordinary bad luck can stop it arriving this year. It is therefore very likely that the next edition will be computer-produced, and will take much less than three and a half years to be issued.

Three issues of The Malta National Bibliography followed the 1983 pilot issue, and it now seems that the M.N.B. is here to stay, despite the shameful short-staffing at the National Library of Malta. It is being instrumental in the raising of cataloguing standards for Maltese publications, but an authority list of personal and corporate names is an indispensable complement to the bibliography if AACR 2 is to be applied correctly by cataloguers.

Automation has forced cataloguers to look more closely at what they do and particularly at what the end user needs. While the niceties of descriptive cataloguing appear to leave the user cold most of the time, the importance of more and better access points becomes even clearer. At the same time the cataloguer's task in establishing both the correct form of heading and alternative forms referring to it has become even more arduous.

Lillian Sciberras has put much work and close attention to detail into this list. Though she has been assisted by colleagues, there is no doubt that the major burden has been hers, and for this all cataloguers ought to be most grateful.

Paul Xuereb

EDITOR'S PREFACE

The Authority list of Maltese names is an attempt at setting a standard form of entry in catalogues and bibliographies for names of Maltese authors (both personal and corporate). Such standardisation offers obvious advantages in information files and is made necessary by the frequent practice of those authors who use differing forms for their name in published works. Traditionally this has involved the use of a Maltese, an English or an Italian form of the same name (e.g. Guzè, Joseph, Giuseppe). In addition initials may be variously used in preference to the full name; alternatively a combination of the forename and an initial may be used by the same person at different times.

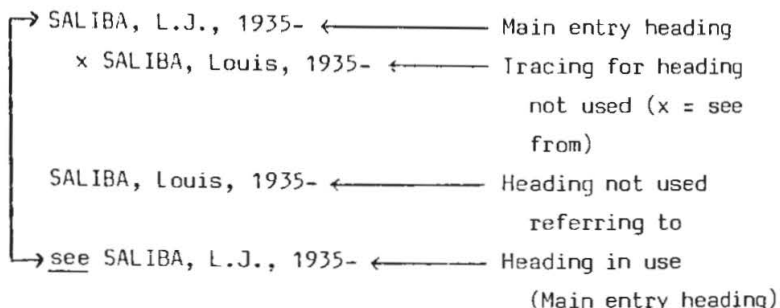

It has been found that such authors - who should of course be free to adopt their preferred form of name at any given time - often succeed in creating difficulties for librarians and library users who, not infrequently, end up imagining the existence of three or more personalities for what may in reality be only one author.

Library users have, moreover, often required the assistance of librarians in attempting to divine whether two or more headings for works by persons with identical names refer to one or more authors.

Corporate bodies too, and government ones in particular, have, over the years, varied or altered their names, often utilising dramatically different formulations for describing their activities.

The Authority list thus attempts to select one preferred heading to represent one person or one body and to connect this to the other headings not used by listing in connection with the preferred heading see, see also, or explanatory references that were made necessary by the practice of the particular author or body. The following example illustrates the procedure used:

The selection of the author's preferred heading is guided by chapters 22 and 24 of the Anglo-American cataloguing rules, 2nd ed. (AACR2), which now forms the basis of descriptive cataloguing and the establishment of headings at both the University Library and the National Library of Malta. The Authority list thus enables the construction of headings to an international standard for Maltese names in the country's two leading libraries. With increasing standardisation made necessary by the introduction of automation the list will hopefully be used more widely in other Maltese and in foreign libraries acquiring publications by Maltese authors.

The names in the present edition are compiled in the first instance from entries for publications acquired by the University of Malta Library from the beginning of 1981 to the end of 1987. In the second instance compilation arose from a number of entries in the main list of the Malta national bibliography since its inception in 1983. Author's names, therefore, appear in the Authority list only if they have been input in either of these two ways.

This edition lists, in an English alphabetical file, a total of 980 entries as opposed to the 505 in the first edition. An innovative feature in the present work is that each personal name heading is listed in conjunction with the title of one associated publication. In most cases this is the title of the publication that prompted the preparation of the entry. It is being included, as in foreign or universal authority lists, to further aid the identification of authors and to help distinguish them from each other.

A further aid in this respect, introduced in the first edition, is the addition of dates of birth and, where applicable, of death to personal name headings. This addition is not mandatory in AACR2 except in cases of identical names but is being included for all names where a search has yielded results.

Such data, useful though they are, are either not easily available or are to be found scattered in the twenty-three or so biographical works usefully listed by John Manduca in the preface to Malta who's who 1987.

Harry Benjamin Formosa's Dictionary of Maltese national biography ... (Manuscript no. 262, University Library's Melitensia Collection); Ghaziz Karmenu, edited by Gorg Mifsud, Valletta : Gulf, 1982; Michael J. Schiavone's 'Il-mexxejja tal-Maltin' in L-elezzjonijiet f'Malta, 1849-1981, Valletta : Bugelli, 1987; Carmel Cuschieri's Malta tqim lil uliedha : portrait gallery of distinguished Maltese personalities, Valletta : German-Maltese Circle, 1987; and the biographical portrait galleries in Heritage and Civilization, not featured in Manduca's list, have also been used to supplement headings with dates. Other additions to names such as the person's profession or vocation have been included when considered necessary to emphasise personal identity.

This second edition of the Authority list is being published close to four years after the appearance of the pilot list first published late in 1984 to coincide with the publication of the pilot edition of the Malta national bibliography. Both can be seen as representative of the developments in current Maltese bibliographical control which have been witnessed in recent years and with which the University Library has been associated from the start.

In conclusion it is hoped that this publication may go some way towards fulfilling resolutions 3.2 and 3.3 of the Commonwealth Library Association European Region's Workshop on the compilation, organisation and production of bibliographies and other bibliographic tools organised by the Għaqda Bibljotekarji and held in Malta in November 1984.
