

Afternoon Moon

by Lisa Kouroupis

After Nicole Gonzalez

In the afternoon the moon gets up from its desk, goes to the bus stop. The moon carries a backpack: pencils and the ends of a sandwich.
It stands at the curb with the clouds like a sweet question.