In the sciences, actually doing research is only part of the picture. This is because publishing papers on one's research is vital. If the outcomes and results of research studies remain unpublished, whether positive or negative, the resources that went into that research will be wasted as someone else may well redo the identical research work. Access to extant research and building on this research is thus vital for the progress of science.

Furthermore, in most countries, research funding is apportioned by the number and importance of the grant applicant's publications. Participation at congresses with oral or poster presentations is also invaluable. But the gold standard remains the original paper written and published in a reputable journal.

Write a Scientific Paper is a three day intensive course with formal lectures and interactive sessions. This is an international and unique course that has been successfully held in Malta in 2010, 2011, 2012, 2013 and 2016. Each iteration has led to fine tuning of the contents via feedback from successive attendees.

The course is now being held for the first time in London. This event attempts to facilitate all aspects of paper writing. The course is delivered by highly experienced researchers. The purpose is to impart the lecturers' collective experience to the delegates in this crucial aspect of career progress. This event is endorsed by the Royal College of Paediatrics & Child Health.

Faculty to date: Prof. Victor Grech, Prof. Charles Savona-Ventura, Prof. Josanne Vassallo, Prof. Jane Somerville and Dr Alessandro Giardini.

The event will be held on 30 January - 1 February, 2017 at the Royal College of Paediatrics & Child Health in London, and has been awarded 18 EU and internationally recognised EACCME accreditation points. ✕
