
Contents

| | |
|--|------|
| Contributors | vii |
| Preface Lino Briguglio | xiii |
| Introduction Richard Butler, David Harrison and Walter Leal Filho | 1 |
| 1 Problems and Possibilities of Sustainable Tourism: The Case of the Shetland Islands Richard Butler | 11 |
| 2 Islands within Islands: Exclusive Tourism and Sustainable Utilization of Coastal Resources in Zanzibar Muhammad Salim Sulaiman | 32 |
| 3 A Strategy for Sustainable Tourism in Sri Lanka Naz Saleem | 50 |
| 4 Tourism and Environment in Guadeloupe and Martinique Maurice Burac | 63 |
| 5 Glimpses of Caribbean Tourism and the Question of Sustainability in Barbados and St Lucia David Wilson | 75 |
| 6 Socio-cultural Issues in St Lucia's Tourism Graham M.S. Dann | 103 |

vi Contents

| | |
|--|-----|
| 7 Ecotourism in the Caribbean: A Sustainable Option for Belize and Dominica? Erlet Cater | 122 |
| 8 Alternative Development Strategies and Tourism in Caribbean Microstates Åke Widfeldt | 147 |
| 9 Sustainable Tourism in the Maltese Islands Lino Briguglio and Marie Briguglio | 162 |
| 10 A Sustainable Transport Policy for Tourism on Small Islands: A Case Study of Malta Derek Robbins | 180 |
| 11 Presenting the Past: Cultural Tour-Guides and the Sustaining of European Identity in Malta Jon P. Mitchell | 199 |
| 12 'But We Live Here!': Perspectives on Cultural Tourism in Malta Jeremy Boissevain | 220 |
| 13 The Walled Town of Alcúdia as a Focus for an Alternative Tourism in Mallorca David Bruce and Antonio Serra Cantallops | 241 |
| 14 Economic Strategies for Sustainable Tourism in Islands: The Case of Tenerife Patrick A. McNutt and Juan Ramón Oreja-Rodriguez | 262 |
| 15 Tourism Development and the Need for Community Action in Mykonos, Greece Margaret A. Stott | 281 |
| Name Index | 307 |
| Subject Index | 313 |

Contributors

JUNIOR COLLEGE
LIBRARY

Jeremy Boissevain is Emeritus Professor of Social Anthropology, University of Amsterdam. Currently a Fellow at the Amsterdam School of Social Science Research, he also works with the Med-Campus Programme for Sustainable Cultural and Ecological Tourism, University of Malta. After directing the CARE programmes in the Philippines, Japan, India and Malta, he carried out anthropological fieldwork in Malta, Sicily, Montreal and Amsterdam. He has published extensively on local politics, ethnic relations, small entrepreneurs, ritual change and tourism. His most recent publications include Revitalizing European Rituals (London: Routledge, 1992) and Coping with Tourists: European Reactions to Mass Tourism (Oxford: Berghahn Books, 1995). Translations of his work have appeared in Dutch, French, Italian, Spanish and Japanese.

Lino Briguglio directs the Islands and Small States Institute at the Foundation for International Studies, Malta and the Gozo Centre of the University of Malta. Professor Briguglio is a co-editor of Insula – International Journal of Island Affairs and editor of Bank of Valletta Review. He is also the series editor of the Island Studies Series, published by Pinter, London. He is the author of a large number of publications on island affairs. He was responsible for the construction of 'The Vulnerability Index' which was commissioned by CARICOM as a document for the UN Global Conference on the Sustainable Development of Small Island States (Barbados, April 1994).

Marie Briguglio is currently engaged as an Environmental Economist in the Environment Management Unit of the Planning Authority of the Maltese Islands, having graduated from the University of Malta with an Honours degree in economics and from University College London with an MSc degree in environmental and resource economics.

David Bruce is Senior Lecturer at Bristol Business School, University of the West of England, where he runs the Business with Tourism degree. A Chartered Town Planner, he is also a Member of the Chartered Institute of Transport. He is a visiting lecturer on tourism policy and the environmental impact and transport implications of tourism at the Universities of Birmingham and Wales, College of Cardiff. In 1993 he led the transnational European Commission funded research project on sustainable tourism in walled towns and continues to be Projects Director for the Europe-wide Walled Towns Friendship Circle. Recent publications include Monitoring and Evaluating a Tourism Development Programme: a Study of Chepstow (1992) and A Handbook of Good Practice for Sustainable Tourism in Walled Towns (1994).

Maurice Burac is Professor of Geography, Town and Country Planning at the University of Antilles and Guyane (UAG), Schoelcher, Martinique (French West Indies). He is Director of the Caribbean Environment, Development and Geography Research Center of the UAG and also Director of the Department of Geography of the UAG. He has participated in various international and regional workshops on environmental and developmental issues in the Caribbean. He has published Les Petites Antilles, Études Géographique des Disparités Régionales de Développement (Presses Universitaires de Bordeaux, 1989) and several articles or chapters in books on the economy, society and town and country planning of the islands, as well as on regional cooperation in the Caribbean.

Richard Butler is Professor of Geography at the University of Western Ontario, London, Canada. He was born in England, and earned degrees in geography at Nottingham (BA) and Glasgow (PhD) Universities before moving to Canada in 1967. His main research interests include the process of tourism development and resulting impacts; specific problems of tourism in islands and peripheral regions; and the relationships between tourists and local residents, particularly indigenous peoples. He has travelled and conducted research in a wide variety of areas including the Canadian Arctic, the South Pacific, the Caribbean, Australasia and Western Europe. He is a former president of the Canadian Association of Leisure Studies, and is current President of the International Academy for the Study of Tourism.

Erlet Cater graduated from the Geography Department, University of Exeter, before undertaking her MSc at the London School of Economics and her PhD at the University of Reading, where she lectures on Third World development in the Department of Geography. Her research interests focus on the sustainability of tourism in the developing world, and in particular on the problems and prospects for sustainable ecotourism. She has co-convened two major conferences at the Royal Geographical Society and acted as a consultant on tourism to the Open University, and on the conservation and development implications of wildlife tourism to the Department of the Environment. She is on the advisory board of Coral Cay Conservation and is co-editor of Ecotourism: a Sustainable Option? (RGS/John Wiley).

Graham M.S. Dann received his PhD from the University of Surrey. Currently he is Reader in Sociology at the University of the West Indies, Barbados. Author of several papers on international tourism, particularly in the areas of tourist motivation, tourism promotion and the semiotics of tourism, he is at present writing a book on 'The Language of Tourism'. He is also an associate editor with Annals of Tourism Research, on whose editorial board he has served for the past 15 years. Currently he is Vice-President of the International Academy for the Study of Tourism, and President of the Research Committee on International Tourism of the International Sociology Association.

David Harrison lectures in sociology in the School of Cultural and Community Studies at the University of Sussex. Having formerly trained as a teacher, he then studied sociology at Goldsmiths' College, London, and social anthropology at University College London. Dr Harrison's first fieldwork was in Trinidad and Tobago, and he later carried out research on the social effects of tourism in the eastern Caribbean. Author of The Sociology of Modernization and Development (Unwin Hyman, 1988) and editor of Tourism and the Less Developed Countries (Wiley, 1992), he has published papers on tourism in southern Africa, eastern Europe and the Caribbean.

Jafar Jafari is a member of the faculty of the University of Wisconsin-Stout Department of Hospitality and Tourism, Editor-in-Chief of Annals of Tourism Research: A Social Sciences Journal, Chief Editor of the Tourism Social Science Series and Founding President of the International Academy for the Study of Tourism (a multidisciplinary community of scholars in tourism research). Dr Jafari's research interests includes tourism and culture change, tourism education, international tourism, and the impact of tourism in developing countries.

Walter Leal Filho is the Director of the European Research and Training Centre on Environmental Education (ERTCEE) of the University of Bradford – Europe's reference point for environmental education research. Dr Leal Filho is also coordinator of the Tourism and Environment Programme, which has undertaken research on the environmental aspects of tourism in Europe and the Caribbean.

Patrick A. McNutt is Professor of Political Economy at the School of Public Policy, Economics and Law at the University of Ulster at Jordanstown. He specializes in law, economics and public choice theory; has acted as a consultant for the World Bank/ECLAC in Latin America; and has held numerous visiting positions including Victoria University, Wellington, New Zealand and Georgetown University, Washington DC. He has published over 50 scientific articles, papers and monographs including The Economics of Public Choice (with Vani Borooh, Elgar Publishing, forthcoming). He graduated from the University of Ulster, Oxford University and University College Dublin, and was appointed to a Chair in Political Economy at the University of Ulster in 1994. He is also the Director of the University's Centre for Research in Economics and Law.

John P. Mitchell graduated in 1990 from the University of Sussex with Honours in social anthropology and African and Asian studies. Since 1991, he has been working on his PhD, registered at the University of Edinburgh. He conducted fieldwork in Malta for two years (1992–4), investigating issues related to social identity, and particularly the use made of history in the constitution of identity. He has presented papers at various conferences in Britain and elsewhere, on topics including memory, cognition and religious experience, the representation of tradition, and political aspects of tourism. He is currently working on his thesis.

Juan Ramón Oreja-Rodríguez obtained his PhD in business administration at University Autónoma de Madrid (Spain). He lectures in business administration and is Director of the University Research Institute of Business (IUDA) of the Universidad de La Laguna in Tenerife (Canary Islands, Spain). Professor Oreja-Rodríguez has been a visiting research fellow at the University of Wales at Bangor and a visiting staff member at Florida International University. His current interests are strategic management and organizational design, with a special focus on the management problems of firms in insular economies in sectors like banking, hospitality and tourism. He is a member of the Board of Strategic Planning of the Island of Tenerife.

Derek Robbins is a Senior Lecturer in the School of Tourism at Bournemouth University and Course Director of the MA programme in Tourism and Hospitality Management. He trained as a transport planner at the University of Westminster and has developed research interests in examining the demands placed on transport operators by tourism. His recent research concentrates on the demands for tourist mobility in destination areas. He has published papers on a wide range of transport issues including the deregulation of the UK bus and coach industry, the Channel Tunnel and consumer perceptions of leisure-related travel. He is also an examiner for the Chartered Institute of Transport.

Naz Saleem is currently a Senior Lecturer in tourism management at Sheffield Hallam University, and he is also an active tourism researcher linked to the Centre for Tourism – the research and consultancy arm of the institution. He holds postgraduate degrees in urban management (economic development policies and public strategic management) and international hospitality management. His PhD research is in the area of tourism planning and development with emphasis on the performance evaluation of local tourism programmes/strategies in England. He is a member of the Tourism Society and a Chartered Institute of Marketing Diploma holder.

Antonio Serra Cantallops is Professor of Marketing and Tourism at the University of the Balearic Islands (UIB) in Palma de Mallorca and Subdirector of the Official Tourism School of the UIB. He studied economics at the UNED (Madrid) and has an MBA degree from the Middlesex Business School in London. He has participated in several studies, including the design of marketing plans for the Conselleria de Turisme (Ministry of Tourism) of the Balearic Government. He is also interested in air transport.

Margaret A. Stott is a consultant in the areas of heritage development and tourism planning. Trained as a social anthropologist, Dr Stott is a specialist in the social and cultural history of British Columbia's First Nations, as well as in the development and impact of tourism in small communities. Her career has included appointments with the Canadian Museum of Civilization, as well as the Department of Anthropology and Sociology and the Museum of Anthropology at the University of British Columbia. In her university and museum positions she has taught courses relating to tourism and development, museum principles and methods, and First Nations art and culture. She has contributed extensively to the Canadian museum community through numerous innovative projects in cultural interpretation.

Muhammad Salim Sulaiman is Principal Secretary at the Ministry of Water, Construction, Energy, Lands and Environment of the Government of Zanzibar. He has held several important positions in different Government Ministries in Zanzibar and has chaired various committees and task forces associated with land use. He is the author of several publications on land surveying and land policies. He is Director of Air Tanzania Corporation and of the National Land Use Planning Commission of Tanzania.

Åke Widfeldt lectures at the Peace and Development Research Institute, Gothenburg University (PADRIGU), Sweden, where he also undertakes research on strategies for development. His special fields of interest are the development of very small island states in a regional context, and the concept of 'another' development. He is presently writing a case study on tourism in the four eastern Caribbean Windward islands. He co-edited the book The Caribbean: A Case of Micro Regionalism (PADRIGU, 1992).

David Wilson is Lecturer in social anthropology at Queen's University of Belfast and holds a PhD from the University of Sussex. He has conducted field research in the Seychelles, the North of England, Northern Ireland and Goa, as well as the Caribbean. Dr Wilson is the author of a number of articles on tourism and his research interests include the socio-cultural impacts of tourism, images of place, heritage, public policy and sustainable tourism development. He is at present writing a book about a public inquiry into the future of tourism on Windermere, the largest lake in England.