

Acknowledgements

This foreword would be incomplete without a formal acknowledgement of the contribution made by a number of individuals and institutions who lent their generous support towards the realisation of this publication and the two seminars which preceded it (in June 1993 and September 1994).

The Mediterranean Office of Friedrich Ebert Stiftung based in Malta, has granted generous financial assistance to this project by funding the 1993 seminar and the publication of this volume. The FES has been collaborating with the WPDC in its education and research programme for the past 4 years and this has enabled the Centre to embark on new initiatives. The International Labour Organisation (ILO), through its offices in Geneva, has also given its support by endorsing and part-financing the participation of key officials who have served as resource persons to the seminars. The Scott Bader Commonwealth, an interesting and economically profitable experiment in collective worker trusteeship, must be thanked for co-sponsoring the participation of its Commonwealth Secretary and for following this up with a courtesy visit to Malta by its Life President.

Further support also came from Malta. Local sponsors included the Central Cooperative Fund, charged with the general development and education of the cooperative movement, and the Committee set up within the Malta Ministry of Education & Human Resources to celebrate the 75th Anniversary of the ILO. Both have also responded generously to the Centre's request for assistance.

The Hon. Dr Joe Cassar, LL.D., M.P., Parliamentary Secretary for Human Resources and responsible since 1992 for Cooperative Affairs, and the University Rector Rev. Prof Peter Serracino Inglott, must be singled out for showing a personal interest in different aspects of the project and participating in most of the proceedings.

A note of thanks is expressed to all those persons involved in the project, particularly the various local and foreign seminar participants and including Mr Nelson Neocleus who represented Cyprus in the June 1993 session; to Mr Rolf Nagel, the former Friedrich Ebert Stiftung Representative in Malta and Dr Manfred Turlach, his successor; to the Workers' Participation Development Centre's Staff, particularly Dr Godfrey Baldacchino, Research Officer who also coordinated the project, Mr Saviour Rizzo, Coordinator of Worker Education Programmes and Ms Edith Rizzo, Executive Officer, who performed the photo-type setting for this publication; Mr Vince Fabri, from the Parliamentary Secretariat for Human Resources; Mr Raymond Scicluna, for audio-tape transcription; Mr Noel Cutajar and Mr Darren Govus for assistance in computer programming and Mr Ġorg Mallia for designing the art work for the cover and for general advice on this publication.

Finally, a note of thanks also goes to the following undergraduate students at the University of Malta: Joe Azzopardi who has since completed the Diploma in Political Studies; and Lucienne Borg, Lorraine Catania, Diane Delia and Dunstan Magro who throughout the months of June to September 1994 have performed their workphase at the WPDC. During this period, in addition to other duties, they carried out a case study of the Spotless Cleaning and Maintenance Cooperative which is reported in Section III of this publication.
