Procedure for students who fail an examination whilst on their mobility

- Students are to check whether the host University allows them to resit the failed study unit.
- If the host University allows the student to sit for an examination he/she would need to check whether this can be done by correspondence with both the host University and the UM. Some of the host Universities only allow students to sit for examinations by being physically present.
- If students are not allowed to resit they are to check with the host University whether they can provide them with an alternative method of assessment.
- If none of the above is possible the student is to check with the Registrar's Office, keeping the Faculty Office and the International Office in copy whether he/she can be conditionally progressed to the next academic year.
